Mr. Heckart has not accepted, and may not be able to do so, though the financial side of the offer is very favorable.

—S. L. Kline received Monday from parties in New York City a letter requesting that the result of the bond election in Corvallis be wired to them, giving the vote for bonds and against bonds. Apparently investors on the other side of the continent are watching for the appearance of the Corvallis water bonds with a view of bidding on them. The incident shows how excellent are the securities as an investment, and it may have the effect to set local people to thinking about the advisability of buying them. In spite of late election assertions there will be a whole lot of those bonds that grafting members of the water board won't want.
